LATELY PUBLISHED

By PEARSON AND ROLLASON.

Price only 2s. 6d. neatly bound,

TAYLOR'S ARITHMETICIAN'S GUIDE;

Or, A complete EXERCISE-BOOK, for the Use of public SCHOOLS and private TEACHERS.

Also, Price 4s. bound,

A KEY TO THE ABOVE;

Containing the Solutions at full Length of all the Questions proposed in the GUIDE—Being very necessary for all TUTORs.

By WILLIAM TAYLOR,

Teacher of the Mathematics, and Land-Surveyor, Birmingham, and Author of several Arithmetical Treatises, Excise-Tables, &c.

In composing the GUIDE the Author's great Object has been (and in which he flatters himself he has succeeded) to shorten the Time usually spent in a Course of Arithmetical Study, thereby rendering both to Pupil and Master, the Task of Education more easy and agreeable. With a due Regard to the Capacities of Pupils, he has omitted nothing which such a Work should include. A Variety of such new and useful Questions as are most likely to occur in Business are introduced, with their Answers annexed, and in order to render the Rules still more clear and familiar to the Pupil, he has, where he deemed it necessary, given at full length the Work of the first Examples in each Rule; most of which are varied or proved by some other Methods of Work. This, though it has never been attended to by Arithmetical Writers, is, he is persuaded, of the first Importance, as it will tend still more to convince the Learners of the Truth of the Rules.

In the KEY (which is published at the Request of several eminent Mathematicians and Schoolmasters who have seen the Manuscript) the Solutions follow the Order of the Questions in the GUIDE, are numbered the same, and the Titles of all the Rules run along the Top of the Pages, so that there can be no difficulty in finding the Solution of any particular Question; whereby this Work is necessary for all Tutors and Others who make Use of the GUIDE. In all the different Parts of this Work, where it could conveniently be done, he has varied the Operations by way of Proof, because it discovers the Reason of the Question, and contributes very much towards a thorough understanding of it.

A SHORT INTRODUCTION TO ENGLISH GRAMMAR,

Adapted to the Use of Schools, with an APPENDIX. Containing, I. Grammatical Figures and Examples of the Ellipsis. II. Observations upon Transposition, with Examples. III. Observations upon the Derivation of Words. IV. Examples of Grammatical Analysis. V. Ungrammatical English to be corrected by way of Exercise.

By EDWARD HARROLD.

The Monthly Reviewers have spoken of this Grammar as follows.—
“Concise but clear and accurate. The Rules are well explained, and the Illustrations are judiciously chosen. The grammatical Analysis, in the Appendix, is equally copious, correct, and instructive. It is, we think, a very good Model for Masters who would lead their Pupils through the various Gradations of Speech, from the simplest Elements to the more complex Forms of Language.”

C O N T E N T S.

An Enumeration, with concise and accurate Descriptions of all the known Vegetables, both foreign and domestic, which are remarkable for medical Efficacy, with their Duration and Season of flowering, the Soil and Situation in which they delight to grow, and their most striking sensible Qualities.

Their common English Names, together with the generic and specific Latin Names of Linnæus, and the Class and Order to which they belong in the System of that celebrated Naturalist.

The Virtues of the Herbs, the various Doses in which they may be taken; the most agreeable and efficacious Methods of administering them, and the particular Cases in which their Use would be imprudent or dangerous.

An Index, in which the several Plants are arranged according to the System of Linnæus, with a brief Illustration of the Circumstances on which the different Classes and Orders in that System are founded.

A Glossary. Containing an Explanation of the scientific Terms which are made Use of in the Course of the Work.

An Appendix, including Directions for gathering and preserving all Kinds of Roots, Herbs, Flowers, and Seeds, with the Methods of making distilled Waters, Conserves, Syrups, Electuaries, Pills, Tinctures, Ointments, and every other necessary Form of Medicine.

A Table of Diseases, with References to such Remedies as are best adapted to the Removal of them.

To the PUBLIC.

NOTWITHSTANDING innumerable Herbals, &c. have been published, it is the Opinion of every judicious Person, with whom we have conversed on the Subject, that there is not one among them calculated for general Utility. Nor will this in the least Degree appear strange, when we consider on the one Hand, that those which have been lately published, and which contain useful Information, are too scientific, voluminous, and expensive, for common Purchasers; and if, on the other Hand, we examine the few wretched Performances, which they are likely to buy, we shall find it is so long since they were published, they are so deficient and full of Errors, the Plants on which they treat are so injudiciously selected, the Descriptions of them so vague and indeterminate, and the Virtues ascribed to them, so numerous and incredible, as to render it utterly impossible for any one who has not previously acquired a considerable Knowledge of Vegetables, and their various Properties, to proceed a single Step with certainty or safety.

To remove these Difficulties, and render the Knowledge of medicinal Plants, easily attainable, and the Administration of them safe and effectual, is the great Design of this Work; and the Author flatters himself, that as every Thing which appears in the least Degree conducive to those Ends will be carefully inserted, and every Thing superfluous and foreign to the Purpose omitted, his Hopes of succeeding in the Attempt will not prove altogether abortive.

No Plants will be introduced to the Reader's Acquaintance, but such as appear possessed of considerable Medical Properties, and no Virtues will be ascribed to any of them but what are supported by good Authority, or confirmed by actual Experiments. It would indeed be an easy Matter to give a much larger Catalogue of Virtues with each Plant, but as most of them will in that Case be fictitious, such a Step would render the Work in a great Measure useless to the generality of Readers. Where every Virtue is attributed to almost every Plant, who but a Physician can determine which is the true One? It being a Matter of the greatest Consequence, in the Application of Herbs to Medical Purposes, to be able to distinguish them from each other; particular Care will be taken to render the Descriptions of those enumerated at once concise and striking, and that one Plant may not be mistaken for another, through the Inaccuracy which prevails among the common English Names of them, the generic and trivial Latin ones of Linnæus will be given with each, and an Index added, in which the whole of them are arranged, according to the System of that celebrated Naturalist; with a brief Explanation of the Circumstances on which the several Classes and Orders in that System are founded, so that little Difficulty can arise in determining whether or not any Plant intended to be made Use of, is the same as that recommended.

The Impossibility of carrying on a Work of this Kind, without introducing some few scientific Terms, will make it necessary to prefix a Glossary, in which all such as occur will be explained. And to this the Reader will therefore have Recourse, whenever he meets with a technical Word, which is not perfectly understood.

A Table of Diseases, with References to such Remedies as are best adapted to the Removal of them, will be added at the Conclusion of the Work. And that nothing may be wanting to compleat the Utility of the Work, there will be given, by Way of Appendix, Directions for gathering and preserving all Kinds of Roots, Herbs, Flowers, and Seeds, with the Methods of preparing every necessary Form of Medicine.

* * As the Author of this Herbal has observed, that the English Names of the Common Plants vary in different Counties of this Kingdom, he will be obliged to any Gentleman who can supply him with such different Appellations, or any Part of them—any Notice of this Kind addressed to the Publishers, PEARSON and ROLLASON, High-street, Birmingham, will be thankfully received.
